ABSTRACT

This annually revised guide lists awards from state library agencies, national and state library associations, and academic institutions offering undergraduate or graduate programs in library education. National associations, foundations, and other agencies known to grant financial assistance for library education are also listed. Not included in these listings are scholarships or awards of less than five hundred dollars. Section one of this guide is arranged by state and covers the United States and Canada. The entries list granting body and/or name of award; type and amount of assistance; number of grants available; and requirements, deadline, and address for application. Section two presents national and regional awards. A list of the graduate library schools accredited by the American Library Association is appended. (Author/SL)

INTRODUCTION

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR LIBRARY EDUCATION, 1975-1976 (published earlier under the title of FELLOWSHIPS, SCHOLARSHIPS, GRANTS-IN-AID, LOAN FUNDS AND OTHER FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR LIBRARY EDUCATION) is an annually revised list of awards from state library agencies, national and state library associations, and academic institutions offering undergraduate or graduate programs in library education. National associations, foundations, and other agencies known to grant financial assistance for library education are also listed.

Not included in these listings are scholarships or awards of less than five hundred dollars. Listings of financial aid in the area of teacher education are not necessarily included, although this kind of assistance can sometimes be used for library education.

This publication does not include all possible sources of financial assistance for library education. Many other possibilities exist. Associations and organizations may offer awards in amounts less than five hundred dollars. Awards not intended primarily for library education may sometimes be used for this purpose. State library agencies and state or regional library associations may offer assistance to state residents which is not listed here. The following bibliography provides suggestions of additional sources of information about financial assistance. Local school and public libraries may suggest other sources as well, including U.S. government publications.

ANNUAL GUIDES TO GRADUATE STUDY: BOOK V, LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCES, edited by Karen C. Hegener. Princeton, N.J., Peterson's Guides, Inc., annual.

CURRENT FINANCIAL AIDS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS. Cincinnati, Oh., College Opportunities, Inc., annual.

GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL OPPORTUNITIES FOR MINORITY STUDENTS. Princeton, N.J., Educational Testing Service, 4th ed., 1972.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR AMERICAN INDIANS. Albuquerque, N.M., Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Department of the Interior, 1972. (ED 067187)

Certain federal program for the encouragement of training of professional librarians have been available during the past several years. However, such programs have been funded at varying levels and in varying amounts from year to year. Most federal assistance programs for library education at the present time are for persons from minority or low-income groups. These programs are normally administered through the library schools to which the scholarships and grants are awarded. It is suggested that interested applicants write directly to the school for information concerning availability of federal scholarships.

Persons who need financial assistance to begin their college work should write directly to the institutions they are interested in attending for information on their scholarship and loan programs. High school counselors may also provide information about sources of financial assistance. Since the basic educational qualification for librarians is a master's degree in librarianship, most of the funds listed in FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR LIBRARY EDUCATION are intended for graduate study in librarianship or for upper-division college students. Length of time needed to complete degree requirements may be an important factor in an individual's financial planning, and it is helpful to know that most graduate programs in library science can be completed in a calendar year.

Persons applying for admission to a graduate library school should also request information about its scholarship and loan program. Each library school offering a program accredited by the American Library Association has some funds available for qualified candidates for admission to its program. Library schools may also provide information on their work-study programs. Most of the schools offering accredited programs have arrangements with libraries in the area which make it possible for students to work while they are earning a degree.

A listing of libraries with trainee or work-study programs may be found in THE BOWKER ANNUAL OF LIBRARY AND BOOK TRADE INFORMATION for 1974, pages 328-341. The annual is available in many libraries.

Any scholarship donor who has been omitted from this publication is invited to submit information for future editions. Only data specifically submitted for listing can be included.

It is appropriate to thank the many members of the Library Education Division who have over the years, assisted in the preparation of the annual publication. By action of the Division Board in 1974 this work became a responsibility of staff. Sheila Duncan, Barry Simon, and Peggy Sullivan are the staff members responsible for this current edition.

[1]Offers post-Master's specialist or certificate program.
(The ALA does not accredit post-Master's specialist or certificate programs.)

[2]Offers program for Doctoral degree. (The ALA does not accredit programs leading to the Doctoral degree.)

[3]Accredited under Standards for Accreditation, 1972, adopted by the ALA Council, June 27, 1972.

[4]Accredited program at fifth-year level leading to the professional Bachelor's degree. Also offers Master's program following the B.L.S.

In 1973 the Committee on Accreditation of the American Library Association began a program of evaluation of library school programs under the Standards for Accreditation, 1972, adopted by the Council of the American Library Association on June 27, 1972.* In the list above, library school programs which have to date been evaluated and accredited under these Standards are indicated by a footnote.

Other library school programs listed above hold accreditation under the Standards for Accreditation adopted by the ALA Council in 1951. The accreditation of a school's program under the 1951 Standards remains in effect until the school is revisited by the ALA Committee on Accreditation for evaluation under the new Standards or until June 30, 1976, the end of the period scheduled for revisits to programs holding accreditation under the 1951 Standards. Accreditation of programs not evaluated within the designated period will automatically expire July 1, 1976.
